Websites

Below is a list of websites with extensive information, documents and links on sustainable water supply and sanitation issues.

The most comprehensive of these sites is the Think Tank on Rural Water and Sanitation found at <http://www.oneworld.org/thinktank/water/index.html>

Focused on rural areas, the One World Think Tank on water and sanitation brings together the information, communication, and content expertise of GARNET, IRC, OneWorld, WaterAid, the World Bank and other partners, directing it to building practical knowledge-sharing mechanisms that bring practice closer to policy. The project has two main components - an electronic dialogue mechanism for practitioners, especially in the South, and a website containing a 'webography' of related papers, conference proceedings, links and other information.

Other useful sites

Water & Sanitation Program www.wsp.org
Has very useful case studies on large scale rural water and sanitation projects in which the demand-based approach was refined — including Bolivia, Sri Lanka and Uttar Pradesh (the Swajal Project featured on pages 25-8), plus many other useful references.

International Water and Sanitation Centre (IRC) www.irc.nl
Has one of the most extensive libraries regarding the water and sanitation sector of the developing world.

GARNET

The global applied research network is a network of professionals, researchers and other interested parties sharing information on research in the water and sanitation sector of the developing world.
