EDM encourages critical thinking on how market systems and financial sectors can be more inclusive and sustainable, with concrete implications for designing, implementing, and evaluating programmes in the global South. EDM is essential reading for practitioners, researchers, donors, policymakers, and finance specialists that facilitate the beneficial engagement of disadvantaged communities in economic sectors.

Contributions to EDM may include:

- Research article: original development-relevant research, peer-reviewed, up to 6000 words
- Perspectives from the field: ideas and experiences on entrepreneurship in developing countries, peer-reviewed, up to 4000 words
- Editorial: reflections on the state of market-oriented research and development practice
- Crossfire: debate between experts on the unknowns, dilemmas, and tensions in microfinance and enterprise development
- Book review: critical thoughts on relevant books and manuscripts

Articles should be submitted to the EDM team at EDM@practicalaction.org.uk

We are proud to announce that Enterprise Development & Microfinance journal is now Open Access, through a Subscribe to Open (S2O) model. All articles published from January 2022 are free for everyone to read and download.

We are delighted to be part of this exciting movement across the publishing landscape towards the opening of content, particularly for authors and readers working in limited-resource contexts. Find out more: practicalactionpublishing.com/subscribe-to-open
